CONCEPT NOTE

In the world of education there are many different ways to teach and to consolidate what has been learned. In years gone by, children were expected to memorise dates, formulae and figures by rote. But this method of teaching can be quite dull, to say the least! One tool becoming more common, especially in online education, is quizzes.

When you're playing a quiz you have to keep your mind on what you are doing. This means that quizzes do help children concentrate. Reading from textbooks often fails to grab our attention. The mind wanders and information is not taken in.

School tests can be an anxious experience for children. They often worry how well they will do, how their results compare to those of their friends or what the teacher will think of them. Playing quizzes at home is much less stressful and provides a means to test ourselves. This can be particularly useful for shy or introvert children who rarely raise their hand in class for fear of getting the answer wrong and making a fool of themselves. Quizzes are a stress-free way to learn.

On the auspicious day of Teacher's Day, Dept of Microbiology has brought up a small endeavour to make learning fun.
